TO: Chief, X-2, Germany

9) In conclusion, a few words might be said regarding the personnel situation here. Both Auner and Neunteuffel, especially the former, have shown a rather marked impatience to get on with the serious work. This need not be taken too seriously, since it is consistent with the personality of the individuals, and perhaps reflects, as much as anything else, the tension resulting from their confinement at Freising. Both have been made to understand that the secrecy and the security of this working arrangement with the Americans is of first importance and must take precedence over any other. It should, however, be remembered that only so much stalling on the part of Centrale will be tolerated by these agents. They are undoubtedly wondering at this moment if the game is worthwhile. Unless they are soon satisfied that Centrale is in a position not only to give intelligent responsible direction, but also to utilize the results of their effort, they will properly decide to terminate the affair.
